

CIA HEAD TESTIMONIES

John Daly at 6:45 P.M. over WABC-TV (NY) and ABC Television Network:

Daly reported DeGaulle's comments following the collapse of the summit meeting in Paris.

THE TV SCREEN SHOWED JOHN DALY STANDING AT MICROPHONE.

DALY: "The French President also discussed the U-2 overflight incident. The flight of our reconnaissance plane over Russia, he said, was not sufficient motive to cancel the Summit conference, and it was necessary to demand a public apology from Washington."

"In Washington, the Senate Foreign Relations' inquiry into the reconnaissance plane incident resumed with Allen Dulles, head of Central Intelligence, on the stand."

"ABC Correspondent Charles Kelley reports from Washington."

MR. ALLEN DULLES WAS SEEN BRIEFLY OUTSIDE THE HEARING ROOM.

ASHLEY: "The CIA chief had nothing to say as he went in and a 'no comment' when he came out. Senator Fulbright, chairman of the committee, told us corridor correspondents that Mr. Dulles was very cooperative but we probably would never get to know what he said. Fulbright said, 'We never ask our spy people about their work,' and then he added:"

SENATOR FULBRIGHT WAS SHOWN BEING INTERVIEWED BY A GROUP OF REPORTERS OUTSIDE THE HEARING ROOM.

FULBRIGHT: "I really don't feel I can say anything about his actual testimony."

NEWSMAN: "Well, there's been a feeling among some members of the Congress that perhaps as a result of this U-2 incident that this treatment of the Central Intelligence Agency might change. How do you feel about that?"

FULBRIGHT: "I don't think so. I don't think -- at least from my point of view, speaking for myself -- I do not think the -- the Intelligence Agency is to be criticized for decisions which I think they are not responsible for. I think they were carrying out activities which had been assigned to them. The questionable decisions were not taken by the Intelligence Agency but by political officers."

NEWSMAN: "Senator, who were the political officers who...?"

FULBRIGHT: "Well, I mean, in the -- in the executive -- in the State Department and the White House."

NEWSMAN: "Does the CIA enter into...?"

FULBRIGHT: "When I say 'questionable', I mean I question the wisdom of them. I don't mean there's anything devious about them. They're perfectly above board. It's an area in which there may be a legitimate difference of opinion as to the wisdom, from a policy point of view. I refer specifically to the assumption by the head of state of responsibility for espionage activities."
